

The Stakeholder Engagement Plan sets out how we communicate and work with communities and other actors throughout the implementation of the project.

It is updated periodically to reflect participatory activities, interactions with stakeholders, information and feedback mechanisms, and the inclusion of new actors.

Who are the stakeholders?

People or groups who:

- Are, or may be, affected by the project positively or negatively.
- Have an interest in its development.
- Can influence its outcomes (positively or negatively).

They include

- Local communities and the Raizal People.
- Formal and informal representatives.
- National and local authorities.
- Social and community organizations.
- Private sector and associations.
- Academia.
- Media outlets.
- Cooperation agencies.

What do we mean by participation?

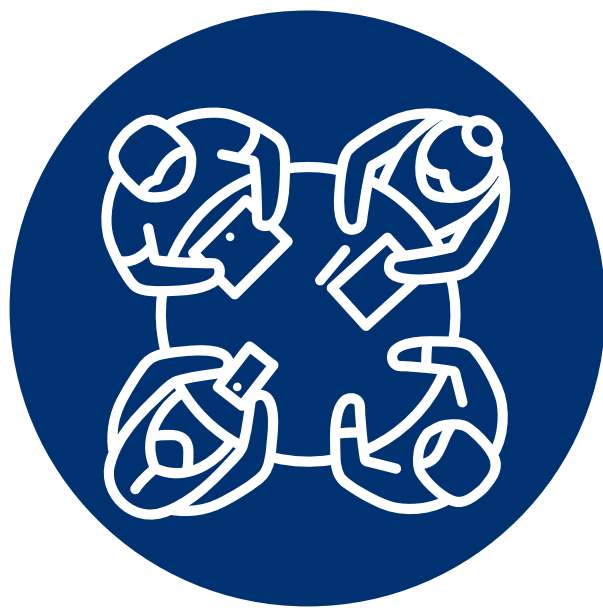

Participation is key to the project's success and means:

- Sharing information and knowledge clearly and understandably.
- Listening and responding to concerns.
- Building collaborative relationships.
- Generating trust and consensus.

What are we aiming for with the Stakeholder Engagement Plan?

To guarantee an appropriate and timely participation process. To that end, we work to ensure that:

- People and stakeholders know what the project does.
- They can participate and share their views in an informed way.
- Their concerns are heard and addressed.
- They know how to submit questions, complaints, or suggestions.
- The project reports back on how it incorporates the input received.

How do we do it?

Holding meetings or facilitating spaces for community and sector-based interaction.

Creating spaces for dialogue with organizations and authorities.

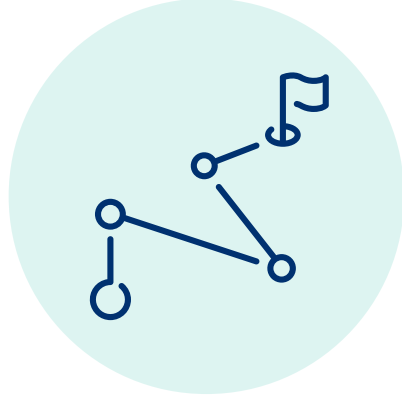

Sharing information through digital, print, or radio media.

Promoting the use of the grievance channel (PQR).

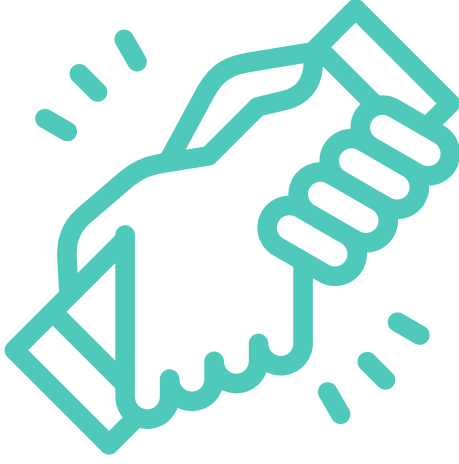

Recording the input received and following up on it.

Reporting periodically on project progress.

What values guide us?

We promote active participation grounded in understanding, respect, trust, collaboration, a sense of belonging, and genuine interest.

Have a question, complaint, or suggestion?

You can use the project's grievance channel (online) or share it directly at the project's in-person spaces.
